Shippey struggles to change existing Alzheimer's rules

Longtime South Belt resident Linda Shippey is on a mission to have the state's Silver Alert laws changed.

Last year, Shippey's husband, former Dobie swim coach Dennis Shippey, went missing while walking his dog in Pasadena and was found by hunters in Rosharon approximately 36 hours later and some 50 miles from where he disappeared. He was barely alive and placed into intensive care for three days.

The former coach, who suffers from Alzheimer's disease, was 63 at the time of the incident. Current state law, however, requires that a missing adult be at least 65 years old in order to issue a Silver Alert.

A Silver Alert is like the Amber Alert, but, instead of an alert for a lost child, is for a lost Alzheimer's victim. Once a Silver Alert has been issued, bulletins are posted on electronic billboards located along freeways and major thoroughfares.

Shippey is confident her husband would have been discovered earlier and in better health had such an alert been issued.

To help in her mission, Shippey traveled to Washington, D.C., last month to attend the Action Summit for Alzheimer's. The conference provided workshops and training to help individuals better understand the political process and how to bring about changes affecting those who suffer from Alzheimer's and their loved ones.

"My husband and the countless individuals diagnosed with early-onset Alzheimers are counting on someone to speak up for them," Shippey said.

In addition to lobbying state and federal lawmakers, Shippey is also in talks with local law enforcement officials to implement the Project Lifesaver program. In the program, those suffering from the debilitating disease are fitted with a bracelet that is fixed with a tracking device that can be traced by participating police agencies should a victim go missing.

While the Project Lifesaver program has been utilized throughout the country, talks with the Harris County Sheriff's Office have proved fruitless as of yet.

Shippey is currently seeking to enlist the help of others in the community.

"Most of you know someone who has Al-zheimer's," she said. "With Alzheimer's, there are no survivors. They need our help."

To aid in her efforts, Shippey has created a Web site.

Readers' Opinions Dekunder writes to thank Pete Olsen

We need to thank Congressman Pete

Olsen for his no vote. This health care will need to be funded for the most part with US government bonds that even China. India and Russia no longer have a strong desire to purchase - that should tell us something as a country. We are on the brink of financial and economic disaster.

Waits on funding space program

Thank you for headlining the "Fight continues over proposed NASA budget" article in the March 25th Leader. Many of us in our community have been sending our lawmakers letters requesting a logical look at terminating the Space Shuttle program right now. Here are my thoughts:

The 2011 budget reduces Space Operations by 20.5% from the 2010 lev-els. We are going to continue to operate the Space Station, but we are going to retire the Space Shuttle.

That is like completing the building of your house and dropping the insurance. The Station is just now being completed and starting to ramp up its science programs.

That is a very complicated piece of engineeering, made from very large parts. If a small object hits a solar panel and destroys it, there will not be enough energy to run the Space Station the way it was designed to. Only the Space Shuttle can lift large pieces that the Station may need. Once it is wounded, it is like Humpty Dumpty!

Did you know that the products pro-duced on the Space Station cannot be safely brought back to earth, except by the Space Shuttle? Not much talk about that, except by the people who work on the downmass of the Station.

What is the use in creating it, if you cannot bring it home to be evaluated, tested, and used? You can't return these valuable on-orbit creations back to earth and slam them into the Earth's surface like the Russian return vehicles do, and expect to have something of value.

I don't know about you, but I cannot understand why we are about to lay off over 10,000 uniquely skilled jobs in Texas, Utah, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida, when the most important thing in our economy's recovery is the creation of jobs and putting people back to work. Once the Space Shuttle is retired, we will have to pay the Russians lot$ to get our own astronauts to our Space Station excuse me?

We need to keep the Space Shuttle operational through the life of the Station, and keep our crucial space skill base in

Thanks for listening....and hopefully helping keep this exceptional program alive by writing and calling our elected officials. Gary Waits

Astronomer Levy shares discoveries of six comets

ence as a young boy interested in the night sky and how his love for astronomy endured throughout his years as an adolescent and well into his years in college, resulting in a career in astronomy. He discussed finding the first of his 22 comets and finding the Shoemaker-Levy

9, a comet that collided with Jupiter in 1994. The Emmywinning astronomer also incorporated the arts into his presentation, describing how some of the earliest English literature pieces explain the mysteries often sighted in the night sky. After his presentation, attended by SJC Chancellor Dr. Brenda Hellyer, Levy autographed books for audience members.

Levy's visit was sponsored by the college's Lyceum Com-mittee, an organization that brings nationally renowned speakers to San Jacinto College to help facilitate the educational process and build awareness concerning social or global subject matters.

San Jacinto College serves a diverse population of more than 27,000 students in over 140 degrees and certificates in university transfer and technical programs. The col-lege also serves the community through workforce training. Students come with various goals and aspirations. and the college is committed to their success.

JFD soccer programs knocked from playoffs

Continued from Page 1B the players gave it their all. But we lost a couple more in the second half, which really hurt us because the depth was depleted."

The toughest part of the outcome of the game was seeing the end of the line come for 11 seniors in the program, including Lariza Uribe, who was injured just prior to the start of the playoffs.

Yancy Moreno was exceptional in her final game, and four-year starter Ashlyn Leighton did everything she could in order to make the outcome different. Lake simply had too much power.

So it's the end of the line for 2010, and Dobie's var-sity girls' program will now proceed without Mullan, who resigned her role after the season (see below).

For 2011, the new head coach will inherit a solid base of talent, paced by leading scorer Tanya Polomares.

A sophomore, Palomares rebounded from a scary soccer playing accident last summer to give the team double digit goals.

Goalkeeper Jackie Baade started both playoff games as a freshman, and she is back.

The other players slated to return include Monika Rivera, Gabby Silva, Karen Treto, Loyce Gayo and Chelsea Williams.
